CAC, the organized voice of the consumer in Canada, endeavors to inform Canadian consumers so that they may be better able to understand and to fulfil their important role in the Canadian economy. It brings views of consumers to the attention of government, producers, trade and industry; examines consumer problems and makes recommendations for their solution and informs on matters of consumer interest.

Action Committees devote their time to informing concerned and confused consumers as to a solution to their problems, and act mainly as a referral service. Concerned also in greater involvement by consumers in pollution control and prevention.
